= What Doug said =

- They don't like to have to make a commitment outside of the cycle — because they like to look at all the proposals together. But they are not rigid about it.

- He doesn't want to micro manage the thing once it's given.

- With 6 figure money they could start their own magazine. But they wouldn't be able to do that until 3 years from now — with time + money commitments

- If they did their own it would be very tightly planned
  - each article would come out just when they decide.
  - there would be a mixture of each of their favorite writers — just the right mix in each issue.

-

386-1800

Dear Kris + Doug,

As I write this we are halfway between Miami + San Francisco. This morning we awoke to birdsong at Fundo Los Leones. Re entering the world of the Industrial Growth Society comes as a shock.

The first surprise is noticing that there is a kind of active, low-grade misery in nearly all the faces we see. The faces of those who live on your farm are faces of quiet, self-possessed well-being. By comparison, the faces in Santiago are full of habitual unhappiness.

A friend of mine who worked in Calcutta with Mother Theresa for a couple of weeks had the same experience as

What more is needed to grasp the inappropriateness of industrial civilization?

Thank you for sharing your lives with Mayumi and me so richly these last days. ~~At my grows~~ I have added insight into ~~the~~ ~~[illegible]~~ effects of commercial industrial ~~of~~ economics ~~in~~ from the readings + our discussions, ~~for~~ over a 9 day period. Watching you both work + love was also full of revelations.

Thanks for all of it. We hope to be able to return the hospitality in the future.

Warm regards,